

option and vir on and examples like the ones shown in Figure 1. The backtracking search is based on the following idea: if a solution is found, it is checked whether it is feasible or not. If it is not feasible, then the search continues by changing the values of the variables that were set to their initial values. This process continues until a feasible solution is found.